under and The Army than I have ever seen before. I am amongst the noblest of his followers. I thank him also that The Army Mother was my spiritual mother, and so I was born in The Salvation Army. I knew Founder intimately for forty years. God did not make a man of the Founder by any criterion of favoritism; it was not that he was specially well placed, there are many here with more advantages, and more favorably circumstanced than he was, but he dedicated to God, he answered the inspiration that came from God.

That which held the Founder in such a great blessing to the world is just this—that in regard to every desire after God that came to his heart, he did not rest in that desire, he was not satisfied with mere sentiment. He wanted to turn every good desire into a reality; and it was that which made it possible to use him as a builder of God's great Salvation Army.

He received inspiration for the service, for the uniform, for theney-seat, for all that fighting spirit which makes The Army strong—what did God inspire the Founder? The Founder's will-power, concentration on doing what God wanted him to do, enabled him to make it all a great and actual fact! The great audience listened with attention to Mrs. Booth's eloquent words, and no section of it gave more heed than that which comprised the hundred of newly-commissioned Officers, who as Cadet-suspects of those former Sessions, named "Aggressors," "Overcomers," "Conquerors," and "Invincibles," have been given the appropriate name of "Factors," a designation which they resolved "to justify."

Another promotion to Glory from Japan is that of Treasurer Wakuya, a seventeen-year-old Tokio Salvationist, seventeen years of age, and identified with The Army in Japan almost from the beginning. A medical doctor, with a good practice, he astonished professional friends and patients alike by wearing a red "kyo Sen" band round his tall hat, and carrying a neat bundle of WAR CRY in his bag for distribution.

He thoroughly did become a Salvationist in spirit that it was not long before he went his rounds in full regulation uniform.

The Commissioner says he was a bold champion for The Army in the early days, when we were much misunderstood, and to come out openly as a Salvationist meant bitter hostility and persecution. The doctor, however, never wavered in the slightest.

He became a Local Officer forty years ago at Hongo Corps, and has been a Soldier and Local Officer ever since. In the early days he was also a wonderful help to Telesio because of his medical skill. Salvationists went to him, Japanese and Overseas Officers and Soldiers alike, and even the sick and dying that the Officers found in their ministrations were, as far as possible, looked after by the doctor. He was also on the Staff of our Matsuda Hospital as Chief Assistant Doctor. Matsuda took the 1923 earthquake.

Thus has one of our Japanese "Great Hearts" gone to his Eternal reward.

THE LAW OF LOVE BEHIND PRISON BARS

The Secret of The Army's Success in Its Work Among Prisoners

spent in comfort and at peace with the world.

All that Joe wanted was a little of the "milk of human kindness" and a chance. And it is just these two things that have superseded—very gradually, of course—the old "mailed fist, iron-heel"—order of things.

What The Army has done in Joe's case would have been impossible had it not been for the cooperation of prison officials. Their attitude towards the prisoner, has undergone no less a transformation than that of the general public. They not only tolerate and permit, but give personal encouragement to any effort of a reformatory character. Here is sample:

A WAR CRY representative was privileged to visit the magnificent Guelph Reformatory and to witness Envoy Dawson "interviewing." In the midst of this a Guard entered, said "Mr. Dawson, here's a chap who hasn't seen his father since he was two years old; he has now learned of his whereabouts. I'd like to see the poor chap have a chance to see his old dad. Can you not do something for him?" By the way, that's where The Army system is seen at its best. The Corps Officer in the town nearest to where the father lived was communicated with immediately. Result: reunion!

From Guards up all cooperate with our representatives in the same generous manner to further the interests of their charges.

A Warm Testimonial

From no less a distinguished notable than the Provincial Secretary, the Honorable Lionel Goldie, a warm and personal testimonial has been received. Envoy Dawson was granted the privilege of interviewing this gentleman recently on matters concerning our work at Mr. Goldie's magnificent residence. Calling at Mr. Goldie's residence, he was shown the greatest courtesy and consideration. Both Mr. Goldie and his wife expressed surprise and delight at the comprehensiveness of our efforts for men behind the bars. "Why," said Mr. Goldie, "you seem to have magnetic power, you bring out a hand one day to charm our men; a company of women another day; a group of singers the next day; it is marvelous, how do you manage it?" Our honorable friends were appreciably enlightened and promised whole support. Mrs. Goldie even expressed a desire to come to an Army meeting at the Reformatory. A further evidence of their practical support was seen in a gift of four hundred Bibles for use in the meetings. Responsive Bible readings, it might be explained, are a regular feature of The Army.

volent ministry are abundant. But we have no need to trumpet our own triumphs. The recipients of that benevolence will do it and do it sincerely and well.

"I am at a loss for words that will convey my deep appreciation for your splendid assistance in my hour of need.

"As I could write my pen could never express my heartfelt gratitude."

"May I add in concluding that I do enjoy the weekly visit of Mrs. (Chaplain's wife) and her reading and prayer. It is indeed a pleasant expectation in the life of one who is unfortunate enough to be continuously confined to hospital."

The writer of this tender note is a reformed man. He received back pension for physical disability contracted during the War, and thought he would "celebrate." In a drunken

The Envoy immediately gave the woman the price of an axe, from his own pocket. His "runner" (an inmate), was deeply touched and said: "My wife was in to see me and left me this dollar, but I can't keep it to use size.

The Thursday following this affecting scene, the bread-winner was released; the family was removed from danger and from becoming a burden which the public would have been called upon to shoulder.

The fruits of The Army's benespare, he was accused of stealing a sum of money from a companion, although there is every indication that he was innocent. Justice followed swiftly. Sickness overtook him and, after appealing to the Parade Board he was transferred to Hospital. Here for the present we must leave him and pray that the visits of the Chaplain's wife may not only bring pleasure, but salvation.

From the bottom of the social ladder-up, might well be written across Richard D.'s life. Ten years in "the Pen," had not sweetened his disposition much, but the Spirit of God broke him up and in one of the meetings conducted by The Army he sang the great Chariot-breaker. Following his release he soon made good the familiar axiom, "A man may be down, but he's never out." Dick has "come back" and to a surprising degree. He secured a position as clerk with a firm and in process of time made himself so valuable that, at the reorganization of the Company he was made secretary-treasurer. But read his own expressive little missive. It tells its own story:

"We have bought a nice little house of our own and expect to be in it shortly. All debts are turned over and we are just waiting for the people getting out. It is a nice little place, pretty inside and out, fenced off, good garden, etc. Mrs. D. and the children are fine. Have been appointed Superintendent of the Sunday School."

A car rolled up to the Ontario Reformatory some time ago. Its occupant made his way to the Chaplain's private "den" and renewed acquaintance with Envoy Dawson who had been the means of his conversion. By the way that was rather an interesting occurrence as the Envoy explains. "At the invitation of the

NINE NATIONALITIES IN ONE MEETING

Penitent Prayers in Five Different Tongues

Lt.-Colonel Barnard, who is visiting Canada East just now, tells of an experience of his in Paris which illustrates how God can deal with souls in spite of the greatest handicaps, and incidentally shows something of the cosmopolitan nature of The Army's work in the French capital.

On the occasion described the Colonel was announced to conduct a meeting in a Men's Social Institution, and when he was about to start he was told that his audience was composed of men of so many nationalities that he would need to know nine different languages to make himself understood by all. As he expressed it, "that was a hard place in which to put a poor London Cockney who didn't know a word of anything but English."

Determined to make the best of it, he started and "preached Christ unto them" in good broad English. His words were translated into French by a regular translator, and he noticed that the men were gathered in little groups according to their nationality, and in each group was one man who was translating the words from French into the language of his little group of listeners.

In spite of the difficulty and apparent confusion caused by all this translation, there were eleven men found at the mercy-seat in the Prayer-meeting which was held later, among them representatives of five different languages.

During a later visit the Colonel paid to Paris, a man came to him and told him he had been at the meeting described and that he was a Russian who had heard the message through one of the interpreters, adding in badly-broken English, "I was one of the eleven who came out to the front and I want to tell you that through your message I have great peace in my heart."

A VETERAN FIGHT PROMOTER

Under the above heading the Sydney "Post" recently published the following part:

"No one likes a joke, whether it is on himself or not, better than Captain Howlett, Officer in charge of The Salvation Army Corps at Glace Bay. The Captain is very popular with the sportsmen of the town, and this afternoon while a number of the town sports were congregated at Senator's Corner, discussing the local boxing situation, Captain Howlett happened along. He was halted by Mickey Walsh, who said to him that Dawn Fraser was looking for a partner to go in with him to promote fights, and Sydney asked the Captain if he wanted to take the job. 'Well,' replied Captain Howlett, 'I've been pronouncing fights against the Devil for many years, so I should know something about the business now. But I guess I am too busy to take on any sideline just at present. Mickey.'"

"Turn to the Light, Man, and get that Shadow behind You"

"Turn ye, turn ye . . . for why will ye die?"

OUR frontispiece this week is worthy of very careful study as many lessons can be learned from it by both saints and sinners.

By a law of nature any man that turns his back upon the light throws a shadow on his own face and darkens the whole path before him; and the brighter the light from which he turns the darker is the shadow thrown. When that light is God's love as revealed in His willingness to pardon, the shadow deepens into the darkness of sin, and unless the sinner turns, it ultimately issues in the gloom of eternal despair.

Another solemn fact of which this picture reminds us is that however brightly the light of God's pardoning love may shine upon men, the acceptance of its benefits is entirely dependent upon the individual. In His wisdom God has made it possible for the weakest man to turn his back

UNDER THE SOUTHERN CROSS

Brigadier Imrie, en route from Australia to England, tells a WAR CRY representative how The Army is helping industrious citizens to new opportunities

TORONTO is entertaining a globetrotter these days in the person of Brigadier James Imrie. A Scotsman by birth, the Brigadier has spent most of the years of his Officership under the Southern Cross in the service of the Immigration Department.

Pressed to tell something of his trip from the Antipodes to our Dominion, he unfolded a veritable travelogue about the Australian Commonwealth and the Islands of the Southern Pacific which he visited.

Brigadier Wright, the Canadian

In a few days he starts for Montreal, thence to Liverpool and London, where he is to take an appointment in connection with migration affairs specially connected with the Southern Hemisphere.

In view of the vital interest being manifested on every side in the migration to Canada of settlers from Great Britain, the following facts, gathered from an interview with Brigadier Imrie, will surely be of interest.

The Brigadier has been actively

Commissioner Whatmore, Territorial Commander for Australia (Southern Territory), bidding Godspeed to Brigadier Imrie at Melbourne. Second from the left (facing the camera) is Colonel Orames, the Chief Secretary, and to the right of Brigadier Imrie will be noticed Mrs. Brigadier Wright, late of Canada East, whose husband was recently appointed to a position "down under."

Officer who was appointed to succeed the Brigadier, arrived in Australia just before Christmas and was promptly launched on a tour of eight thousand miles, during which his predecessor introduced him to many of the leading men and women of the country, and provided the newcomer with priceless opportunities of becoming familiar with the work of his new charge.

Leaving Australia on March 24th, our traveller visited New Zealand, where he led a few meetings and conducted an inspection at Putaruru Farm, where immigrants receive Francisco, with brief visits to some of the cities across the Pacific to San Francisco, with brief visits to some of the charming Islands of the sea en route.

Up the coast to Seattle and Vancouver, then across continent to Winnipeg and Toronto, with meetings in every city visited, brought this welcome visitor to the Editorial Den, where he fairly bubbled over with facts and figures, experiences and theories concerning migration affairs.

engaged in Army immigration affairs in Australia from the beginning, and speaks from knowledge gained firsthand. He speaks warmly of this as follows: "Remember I have seen these things with my own eyes, have studied them very carefully for a long time, and I know how things go. I know who looks after these people and who makes good on the job."

Giving Boys a Man's Chance

His first word was about boys and young men who go to Australia for farm work. Because farming in the Antipodes is somewhat different from that done in England, these lads are not trained before leaving the Homeland. They are carefully chosen, assisted with their passage, sail under the care of a competent conductor, and on arrival are given a course of training. This takes place at Riverview Farm, comprising some six hundred and twenty acres of spindly land about fourteen miles from Brisbane. There, during a period of four months they are taught the things essential to successful farming.

The government officials of Queensland regard this farm as only an agricultural college, and show their interest by having government experts attend and give lectures to the boys. At the end of the course, examinations are held and the results are very gratifying. A very practical evidence of the value of the course is the fact that boys trained there can demand and receive higher wages than those not so trained.

The Army has entered into an agreement with the Government to provide and train three hundred young men on this farm. Up to the present about two hundred have passed through and gone on to larger opportunities.

On completion of training the boys are sent to selected farms under an agreement that they are to remain for at least a year, and The Army maintains an oversight of them for at least three years. The Officer in charge of this work of oversight is Staff-Captain Parsons, recently appointed from Canada East.

Domestics

There is a large and constant demand for domestics in Australia, and The Army has taken out about eight hundred young women and placed them in positions there. Assisted passages and all the advantages of personally conducted parties have contributed much to the comfort and well-being of all concerned. Lodges are maintained at four centres, which serve as rallying points for the girls in their new surroundings so far from home. Monthly reunions are held, and these evenings with music, friendly intercourse and refreshment for body and soul, are bright spots in the life of many a homesick girl.

Another highly-prized privilege is membership in the "Homeland Club" and "Brightview Women's Club," specially organized for their benefit. In connection with these clubs, bi-monthly outings are held at the seashore or hills under the care of responsible Officers. So hundreds of girls are finding "home away from home" and becoming happy and useful under the flag of their adopted country.

Helping Widows

The method of procedure is different with widows and their families, about four hundred and eighty of whom have been happily placed, some of them having as many as eight children. On arrival, the mother is provided with a cottage furnished according to the needs of her family. Then each case is dealt with according to circumstances; employment is found for the mother or any of the children old enough to work and all are carefully shepherded until they become self-supporting. Under all circumstances The Army guarantees that they shall not become a public charge in any way. Not infrequently the mother will re-marry, with happy results to all. One such writes, "I came out with four children dependent upon me. I am married again, have a comfortable home, and was never happier in my life. It was a great day for me when I landed in Australia."

A few children have been taken out for adoption, and Brigadier Imrie says that he has personal knowledge that every one of these is now in a good home, comfortable and happy.

Reinforcements

When the new settlers are Salvationists, efforts are naturally made to link them on to Corps in their new homes, and this is beneficial to both them and the Corps. At one Corps are thirty Bandsmen, twenty-eight of whom came from the Old Country in this way. Another Corps had no Band and now has twenty-four Bandsmen, all recently arrived. Quite a number of these newcomers have entered the Training Garrison and are making useful Officers.

The Government of West Australia is opening up new country into what are called "Group Settlements." The plan followed is roughly as follows: Twenty married men are sent into the settlement, which is a country of heavy timber, while their families are left behind. These men put up rough shacks and make what preparation they can for their families who follow them after an interval of a few weeks. The Government makes each head of a family a gift of one hundred and sixty acres which he is to develop into a farm.

Support for his family is provided for the first two years, also some stock and a cottage, and he is allowed up to thirty years to pay for this. About nine or ten thousand people have been placed in this way, and the plan promises great things for the future. The Army is planning to tour these settlements with "Battery vans" for spiritual meetings.

June 16, 1928

THAT some great world-shaking event was due to occur on May 23rd last, seems to have been in the belief of numbers of folk in various parts of the world. In Canada people were warned by would-be prophets that there was to be a resumption of the world war on that date. In England thousands of people are reported to have assembled on the sands of Weymouth in expectation of seeing a tidal wave come in. It seems to us that the safer course would have been the high hills.

But nothing happened, and now the predictors are busy explaining that they were mistaken in their calculations.

The trouble with all these folk who fix dates for future happenings is that they endeavor to make insignificant events fit in with their preconceived theories. And after all it is only guess work. By noting the trend of events, and by observing that the pursuance of certain policies or habits will lead to certain inevitable results, it is no doubt possible to foretell what will happen to nations or individuals in a few years unless they change their course.

It is certainly foretold in Divine will that "the wicked shall be turned into Hell, with all the nations that forget God." But who can tell whether a person will repent or a nation adopt other policies and thus avert the sentence of doom.

To set arbitrary dates, however, for the beginning of another world-conflict, the coming of the Lord, or the end of all things, is but to waste time in futile speculation. Besides this it is mischievous and harmful as it unsettles many people and brings all disappointment and disillusion, followed, in many cases, by complete scepticism.

The better way is to go quietly on with our work, seeking over to bring people to a knowledge of Christ and His salvation, confident that whatever happens we are safe beneath His sheltering care.

THE nations of Europe, ten years after the close of the great War, are slowly recovering from the frightful ravages of that terrible conflict. Writing in the "Review of Europe Desires Peace" Mr. Frank H. Simonds, who has just concluded an investigation into conditions on the Continent, says:

Saturday, June 23rd—Proverbs 16:11-21.

"Pride goeth before destruction." Beware of pride! It brought Satan from Heaven, and is one of the greatest sins in the sight of God. Even "a proud look" is hateful to Him (Ch. 6: 16-17), and "the proud He knoweth afar off." All forms of pride are bad, but spiritual pride is the most dangerous of all. Begetting self-confidence, it leads to neglect of prayer and watchfulness, thus is almost sure to enm in a fall.

"The worship of Venus means the wrecking of home life, the destroying of those moral standards which have been built up in our social structure. The flood of sex literature and the flood of sexual music and sexual dances imported from pagan Africa that have had their origin in brotherhood must be checked, or Venus will reign triumphantly over civilization and destroy it."

"Mars, god of war, is not content with the harvest he reaps on the battlefields. He is worshipped even in times of peace, when chauvinism and race hate take the place of war."

The best way to combat these evils is to follow the teachings of Christ and proclaim them to others. He said: "Ye cannot serve God and mammon," and made it clear that His disciples must resist the degrading influences of a money-mad world and seek first the Kingdom of God. Regarding vice He taught that only the pure in heart shall see God, and as for war He plainly showed its futility by declaring "They that take the sword shall perish by the sword." He also expressed His eternal disapproval of all hatred by saying, "He that hateth his brother is a murderer." Truly it is an evil trio which the rath denounces, and The Salvation Army is in the forefront of the battle against them.

IN THIS age of machinery we often wonder what will be the next wonder to be sprung upon the world. The latest machine we have heard of is designed to help people read books without straining their eyes. The machine is said to be something like a camera, and apparently it will also be like a phonograph, a piano-player and a radio.

All that a reader has to do is to take from his library shelf a roll of film of whatever book he wants to read and insert it in the camera-like box. He turns a switch and then sits back to listen as the film unwinds. Or the busy housewife may turn it on while washing the baby, ironing clothes, or peeling potatoes. Through a radio loud-speaker will come the dulcet tones of the machine, going tirelessly on at a speed much greater than one can read to oneself and without the eyestrain that makes continuous reading difficult.

Still another machine of this sort has been devised intended especially for the use of the blind, thus making accessible to them thousands of volumes which they have been unable to enjoy. Thus science is continually adding to the marvels which characterize its achievements in this wonderful age.

HOW THE ARMY HELPS

Destitute Mother and Children Cared for and Wild Girl Restored to her Home

One day there came to The Army's Children's Home in Ottawa, a woman with two little children asking for help and shelter. Her husband had been out of work for some time.

Mother and children were taken in. Work was found for the mother in the Home and the children were taken care of until finally got work on a farm, and family were happily reunited.

In a town not far from Ottawa one day the Chief of Police brought to The Army Officer a young girl who had run away from school in Ottawa, and had been running wild in the town for some little time. Mixing in fast company and visiting restaurants late at night she was fast hurrying to a bad end. The police hesitated to lock her up on account of her youth, but brought her to The Army Officer instead to see if any thing could be done for her. The Officer kept her in their home several days at great risk because of the unhappy girl's condition, got in touch with her relatives in Ottawa, who had not the slightest idea where the child was, and succeeded in getting her safely back home.

Some Comments on Current Thought and Events

"All Europe desires peace . . . It is clear that for a new war now would be an expense to the people in every nation, great and small; the struggle to get back, the battle for existence, for a living, for even the bare necessities, would acute to permit time, effort or money to be diverted to preparations for a war. European peoples are not thinking about war in terms of war, despite all the sabre rattling that goes on. Nothing that I can detect at close range suggests that the old continent will not see a generation of peace based on the similar span of quiet after the wars of Napoleon, upon exhaustion."

The rivalries, hatreds and ambitions of various peoples, however, still tend to create "danger spots" in certain places, and the real disturbing factor is that when the generation which has been horrified by war has passed away, the new generation will again resort to combat in another vain effort to settle its disputes in that way. God speed the day when the nations shall "learn war no more," but will scrap their armaments, forget their differences and join hand and heart in the task of promoting one another's welfare. Then indeed there will be peace on earth and righteousness will prevail.

BEYOND doubt this age is characterized by its restlessness. People are obsessed with the desire for change and excitement. They are "running to fro" as never before. Speaking in Age A Restless Toronto recently a woman president of a church society said:

"The temptation is great to see the world and escape monotony and taste variety and gain what we call experience and knowledge. The solid sense of duty upon which a society like ours has been built."

This is no indictment of travel for educational or recreational purposes, we take it, but a protest against the idea that people must be constantly shifting their place of abode in the search for happiness. The fields always look greener on the other side of the fence, until we get there, and then they are apt to prove disappointing.

Happiness is not found by constantly changing one's environment. That course is more likely to involve one in greater difficulties and perplexities. The source of true happiness is within oneself; it springs from a consciousness of being right with God and man. A great lesson that many people in this restless age need to learn is that "godliness with contentment is great gain." Grasping this they would be willing to "do the duty nearcast, though its dull at whiles," and would not rush hither and thither in search of thrills.

THE three hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the circulation of the blood is being observed by scientists in many lands. Although is being observed in America, Germany, France and Italy. To the great meeting of the Royal College of Physicians, in London, on May 14-18 came scientists from everywhere. It was a sign that modern science, built up as it has been by every race and nation, is inching down national barriers.

In olden days doctors used to believe that a spirit of some sort had a part in the blood system, perhaps animating the heart. The discoveries of Harvey added much to human knowledge and it is fitting that his memory should be honored.

AJAH Mammon, Venus and Mars are the great enemies of humanity against whom relentless war must be waged.

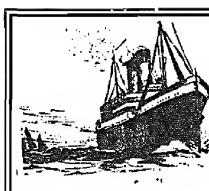

An Evil Trio It may startle some to realize that these three ancient pagans deities are being extensively worshipped to-day, but it is a fact beyond dispute. To quote the rabbi:

"The worship of Mammon," he said, "is the antithesis of all fabric, devalues culture and creates false standards by which men are judged and ambitions stimulated. We would destroy the power of Mammon, we must judge men by the lives they lead, by the culture they

"I LOVE TO DO IT!"—TRANSMUTED BRICKS AND MORTAR
EMPTY HEARTS — CALL AT COLOMBO — AN OCEAN
BURIAL—RED SEA CROSSING—GLAD, AND SAD

Monday, December 6th, 1926 (continued).—At sea. There is another Colony on the Island of Sumatra, and this we must at once extend. There are fifteen hundred lepers known to be in the jungle round about; these are mostly starving, and not infrequently they are captured by wild beasts.

The Salvation work amongst those people is a reality, and the change in those who get saved is most striking.

It seems to me monstrous that creatures so helpless and so shunned as these, should be allowed to wander and suffer and starve. The Dutch Government is doing more than any other Government, but more yet must be done.

I spoke with several of the Officers; all happy in their work and devoted to it. Smith, after witnessing the dressing of wounds, said to one woman comrade, "I cannot think how you can bear to do it!" He received the reply in a moment, "Oh, I love to do it!" Yes, that is the secret of the whole thing.

Back to Medan at 2 o'clock, met Officers, cheered them up, and left at 3 for the boat. Might have had another hour, as we did not leave till 5. Too bad!

Today, very warm. Slept well, though the night was oppressive indeed. Dreamt of those unfortunate people. From their aspect whilst I was speaking of some things I should think at any rate some of them have been wicked in early life. Well, we are all wicked; it is only by boundless mercy that we have anything worth having.

To work by 9 o'clock on deck; nice breeze here. We are to call at Sabang, the extreme point of Sumatra. Pirates used to infest these parts, and Cis was the centre. Bernard and Smith went for a bathe—a success!

A little talk with a passenger going to Holland. Does not speak much English, but knows about The Salvation Army. Just an ordinary money seeker, and yet—what he might be! "Bricks and mortar," somebody says, "are just mortar and bricks—till the architect touches them and makes them into something else." So I see sometimes a vision of what the common man may be if only the Divine Designer can get His way with him.

something in a Living Temple—in the City of God—in the Everlasting Kingdom!

Tuesday, 7th.—At sea. Said to be a little cooler. Drawing away from the "line" and a north wind to relieve the situation. Wrote some, dictated some, and reviewed our decisions with Cunningham.

Brief conversation with the Captain of this boat; a very superior man. When I closed in upon him and pressed him, he said a rather revealing thing: "Yes—I have a religion—but—no, nothing speaks to me here" (putting his hand on his heart). Was evidently pleased that I should speak with him. In every part of the world I come up with those empty hearts.

Wednesday, 8th.—At sea. Some good work to-day, thank God. Some that cooler, or, at any rate, less humid.

Beginning to feel the pressure of immediate needs in London. My thoughts are often hurried from pillar to post; should I say that my feelings are kicked between those feelings?

State of things in China very disturbing. It seems that we must finally accept it as a fact that Marshal Feng has gone over to the Bolsheviks in receiving financial support from Moscow. This is the more important because, as I have gathered, many moderate-minded people I liked to him, and will now feel that they had better follow him to the Reds.

Thursday, 9th.—Arrived Colombo at 10 a.m.—sooner than scheduled. No one to meet us, though the Government authorities had arranged for a launch to do so.

To Hotel G.O.H.—Colledge (Lt-Colonel and Territorial Commander) and the Clerk Secretary soon put in an appearance. Glad to see us. Visited several of the new properties and pleased with them.

Newspaper representatives at 4.30. The growth of the English papers in the East very striking fact.

Officers' meeting at 5.30. Very hot and crowded. Later returned to hotel and final talk with Colledge. He is making a brave fight. Threw in launch to P. & O. boat "Narkunda," and boarded her at no small risk, the water being so rough.

Saturday, 11th.—At sea. A little more sleep, and completed some work—not very important. Very tired. Read a little. Thinking of the opportunity for our literature. Surely we shall be able to open the eyes of our own leaders to its value! I am afraid we are sadly behind in this respect.

Sunday, 12th.—At sea. More restful to-day. My steward, a very nice fellow, comes from Balham. Obviously sorry that I have been inconvenienced by the heat.

Gave some attention to affairs, and some time in thought with God—my need. His great fitness! It is so easy to feel that they are far apart—especially they are side by side.

Slept better, but the beds are not as good as they should be! They really accept it as a fact that Marshal Feng has gone over to the Bolsheviks in receiving financial support from Moscow. This is the more important because, as I have gathered, many moderate-minded people I liked to him, and will now feel that they had better follow him to the Reds.

Monday, 13th.—At sea. Feeling distinctly brighter.

Gave Smith two or three hours on London business. Commissioner Cunningham is not well. The fact is, we are all tired, and the Commissioner has had a heavy strain.

Tuesday, 14th.—At sea. Some pray or last night lifted my heart with all its burdens. Met this morning by news of the death of a passenger during the night. Came on board at Colombo suffering from the fruits of an evil life; was buried at 12.30 to-day. All very formal, yet something very impressive: the solemn words of the Burial Service—the Captains standing by the body—the open hatch-way to the sea—a few officers with prayer-books—the silent seamen waiting—and then the lifting of the cover and the body slipping out in its sacking into the ocean and gone!

As I looked around, I could only think that every one on this ship must come to the appointed end. Ob, to live—to live!—as far as in us lies, so that death shall be life!

Wednesday, 15th.—At sea—and Aden. Arrived about midday. Weather cooler. What a parched, arid front the country presents! My party persuaded me to go ashore and view the "tanks"—stone water cisterns of immense size. Tradition dates them from the days of Solomon; certainly they are very ancient. Man has done but little here, and yet that little has given him an immense resource. The only want on the part of man at the moment is—water!

Tea at hotel in the town. Much bargaining going on between some of our fellow passengers and native peddlars who seemed to get the advantage—really interesting to watch for a bit! The Arab children attracted me—they are very alert. Also the camels—long rows of them—looking so strange as they gaze at the motors flying past; and the Eastern houses, so near together, so flat, so dusty, so full!

Thursday, 16th.—Red Sea. Latitude 15 at noon to-day; two hundred and fifty miles of the Red Sea passed.

Cables last night and this morning good. Letter from the British Commissioner; encouraging view of the Salvation position in the United Kingdom despite the strike. Praise the Lord!

Saturday, 18th.—Gulf of Suez. Struggled hard on some work I much wanted to compass to-day, but did not make much headway.

Nice talk with Dr. Rufus Jones a Quaker minister. Many matters on which we agree. I tried to encourage him in the direction of aggressive work, and this is what he is already doing. Was in China and Bombay; is going to Palestine—Bethlehem—for Christmas. Is intelligently appreciative of the Salvation Army.

Sunday, 19th.—Suez Canal. Arrived with due commotion at Suez at 4.45. Stayed about two hours, and into the Canal—my second entry from the Suez end.

The engineering feat represented here is a much less thing than the idea. Cunningham says the Panama Canal—which was, of course, also de Lessens' thought—is a far greater work; and it must be, if only by reason of the varying levels. But the idea is the same!

Creeping along all day, and made Port Said about 6.30. Coaled. What a sight in the dark! The coolies—their blackness and nakedness—the rags—the dust—the stirring wild cries! We took in two or three thousand tons of coal!

Not very bright to-day. Strange words and thoughts leap up and pass by like frightened birds, but stirring others as they fly. When I speak of what we have accomplished. I am glad—all glad; and then, when afterwards I reflect, I see so little in comparison—relative, that is—to the need, and I am sad—all sad.

Worried, nay, distressed about the godless passengers on this heat and our apparent inability to do anything for them.

Riverdale

A tried and faithful warrior of the Cross. Sister Mrs. John Coleman, answered the Call on Friday, May 18th. For over forty years she labored for the Master 'neath The Army Flag. Our comrade lived a life of victory; and even though unconscious for many hours prior to her passing, she died in triumph. The Funeral took place from the Riverdale Citadel on Monday, May 21st. We pray that God's sustaining Grace may be vouchsafed to her husband, Bandsman John Coleman, in this sad hour of loss.

"DAD" DONAVAN,
Fredericton

Death has broken our ranks at Fredericton, and within less than a week two of our oldest Soldiers have answered the Roll Call.

The first to go was "Dad" Donavan, at the age of eighty-seven years. He became a Soldier here in 1888, putting in forty years service, and until six months ago attended the meetings. His testimony on Sunday mornings was always an inspiration. He entered the Valley of Death fearlessly. "On my last visit, on the day before he died," writes Field-Major Hiscock, "I asked him if all was well, and his answer was, 'All is well, Jesus, blessed Jesus.'"

Two of his daughters, who live in the U.S.A., were with him during his last few days. His answer to questions concerning his soul's welfare was just, "I am awaiting the Home Call."

Three Veteran Warriors
Enter into Rest

Mrs. Ensign Fall, was home for the Funeral.

We buried Brother Donavan with full Army honors, and the large number of friends who attended evidenced the respect in which he was held. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His Saints."

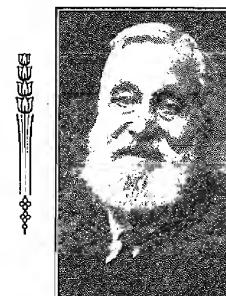

"DAD" BUCHANAN,
Fredericton

Five days after Brother Donavan's passing, Death came to dear old "Dad" Buchanan, who was in his ninety-second year. He also connected himself with The Army in 1888, when fighting was hard and severe; but it can also be said of him that he was faithful to the last. He followed the trade of a carpenter, and his employers testified that "he put his religion into his work." He is greatly beloved by the people of Fredericton, and he has left behind the rich legacy of a golly, faithful life.

Two of his daughters, who live in the U.S.A., were with him during his last few days. His answer to questions concerning his soul's welfare was just, "I am awaiting the Home Call."

He was buried with full Army honors and beneath the Flag he loved to carry through the streets of Fredericton. Both of these veterans were buried beside their wives, who had been such a help to them in their early struggles in Army warfare.

"Dad" Buchanan, Fredericton.
(Taken in his 91st year.)

What an inspiration those dear old comrades have been to us, and how we shall miss them, but it is for us to hold fast that which is good.—Field-Major Hiscock.

Apprenticed for "Meat and Clothes"

His eventful career began in a Devonshire village called North Bovey, a few miles from Dartmoor. He had no schooling whatever, and when he was seven years of age his father was the lot common to many boys of that time, he was apprenticed to a farmer for his "meat and clothes."

Under this arrangement he was bound by law to stay for six years without pay, at the end of which time he could leave or demand a wage; meanwhile the farmer was bound to keep him in food and clothes.

His first duty was tending the cattle grazing on the moor, but as he got older he learned all the ins and outs of a farmer's life. About once in three months he was allowed to visit his father, riding home on one of the rough Dartmoor ponies.

To say he had no money is not exactly correct, although a boy with the same amount in these days would probably feel that he had none.

Once a year a big country fair would be held in his neighborhood, and young James was allowed to attend.

Gold about 6:30. Coaled. What light in the dark! The coolness, the blackness and unceasiness—the dust — the stirring wild air! We took in two or three thousand tons of coal.

Once a year a big country fair would be held in his neighborhood, and young James was allowed to attend.

When his work was done and he had ridden the miles to the fair, he had two hours in which to enjoy himself before starting for home again, and sixpence pocket money to spend. So you see he had some money, one cent a month to be exact; incidentally the farmer owned and operated three large farms.

By the time our hero was fourteen he was a regular farmer, could plough a furrow with the best, and as the nearest railway was fourteen miles away, he had considerable experience of teaming with horses.

"Took the Shilling"

When he reached the age of eighteen he decided he had had enough farming for awhile, so he journeyed to Exeter and "took the shilling," in other words he joined up as an Artilleryman, but for home service only, for a term of six years. His pay as a defender of his country at this time was fourpence ha'penny (nine cents) a day, with this peculiar feature, that it was paid every day. At the conclusion of each daily parade, before the men were dismissed, each man was handed his pay, and thus Her Majesty was out of his debt.

It was hard to believe that this vigorous man, apparently in excellent health, and standing in the alert attitude acquired by many years "in the service," is eighty-three years of age and now spending his declining years quietly until it is his Lord's will to call him to his life-partner, who went to the Gloryland about two years ago.

Brother Brown still wears the military moustache of a generation ago; and his hair are quite white, but his bright gray-blue eyes and his white bearing would indicate a man two decades younger than he is. On the other hand, to hear him talk of his early life is to get first-hand information of conditions and events of seventy or eighty years ago.

When his term of service expired, he went back to the farm for a few months, but by this time the lure of the service was upon him. So one morning he got up long before daylight and walked the sixteen miles to Exeter, arriving there at 7 a.m., and "joined up" again, this time in the Royal Marine Light Infantry. In this arm of the service he spent the next twenty-one years of his life.

The infantry branch of the Royal Marines was known as the "Red Marins" because of their red coats to distinguish them from the Marine Artillery, who wore blue coats and were called "Blue Marins." The duties of the "Red Marins" were very varied and arduous, so our newly-enlisted comrade spent twelve months at the Marine Barracks at Plymouth learning the shore duties, and was then drafted to a man-o-war for sea duty. At that time warships travelled under sail almost entirely, and while they were fitted with steam engines these were only used in case of emergency. One of the first cruises in which he had a part was a trip around the world with "The Flying Squadron" on the Flagship "Narcissus." As the years rolled by he was privileged to serve on many famous ships and to visit many places of interest all over the world.

Went with the Crowd

From Hong Kong to Cape Town, and from Bermuda to India, he journeyed in ships whose names were household words half a century ago, such as the "Dryad," the "Royal Alfred," the "Royal Adelaide," and many others. He had no home ties, so after a cruise of two or three years he would soon tire of shore leave and apply for duty again. During these years his character and conduct were not much better or worse than those around him.

He was in constant association with men who felt that hard drinking was a sign of manliness, and that a conversation was improved by a plentiful sprinkling of oaths, so he went with the crowd and did as they did, but his duty was never neglected, and he became recognized as a dependable and capable man.

Again and again he had opportunities for promotion but was afraid to accept it because he could not read or write and was keenly conscious of his shortcomings. He avoided the unwelcome subject of promotion by a method all his own, which was very simple but very effective; when the matter became urgent he would simply overstay his shore leave, which would be registered against him as a crime, thus barring the promotion while it was really a very trivial matter.

At last, however, his superiors decided to overrule this, so he was summoned before his commanding officer and told that he was to be made a gunnery instructor. His first words were, "But I can't read or write, sir"; on which the old marines glared at him and shouted, "Well, you can learn, can't you?" Brown subsided forthwith, and in due time became an instructor in gunnery.

This meant that his service afloat was over except for short periods when giving men a course of gun-

Flag-Sergeant "Dad" Brown of Wychwood (right), with his son, now a sergeant-major in the Royal Engineers, and grandson, Bandsman Dean. The last-named was enrolled at the Swearing-in of the Bigger and Better Campaign Recruits, held at the Wychwood barracks where his grandfather was one of the Color-bearers on the platform.

ney aboard ship. So once more we find him living in Plymouth until his days of service were over.

Here he met The Salvation Army, and his relations with the Organization were far from intimate and gave little indication that he was destined to march in its ranks and proudly hold at the shoulder the Colors. So bad were the riots associated with Army work at that time that an Open-air meeting, wherever held, was "out of bounds" for all service men; attendance at indoor meetings was allowed, but the privilege was never used by Brown.

His attitude, at this time, toward all things religious was one of complete indifference; he said or did nothing for or against it, he just left it alone.

While in the Marines he met, in Plymouth, a girl he had known in his boyhood, who became his wife, and whose beautiful Christian life was the star which led him to the Saviour and along the pathway of service. With infinite tenderness he says, "She prayed for me for twenty-one years before I was saved."

Mrs. Brown was converted under the famous Colonel Dowdle, and was a zealous Christian Missioner and one of the first women to wear an Army bonnet.

She and the eight children went to The Army all the time, her husband never. Officers visited their home, and cottage meetings were held there at intervals. Her husband raised no objection, but was always absent. During those days his drinking habits continued, but he never became a "down-and-out" or neglected his family. Through all the years that he was a drinking man liquor did not seem to have the degrading effect on him which it had on so many others. However hard he drank, his health did not appear to suffer and he could always do his work. The penalty came later, however.

Wife's Prayers Answered

At last his wife's prayers were answered and James Brown was led into the light of God's salvation about twenty-nine years ago. On a certain Monday night a Harvest Festival celebration was being held at the Corps and Mr. Brown called at the Citadel to accompany the children home after the meeting. He arrived before the meeting closed and stepped inside the door to wait. He was just in time to hear one of his daughters, now Mrs. Adjutant Fox, sing a childlike solo. His heart was strangely taken hold upon, and when the Corps Officer visited his home during the week he broke his usual custom and remained in the room. Kneeling there in his own home with his wife and the Officer he gave his heart to God, definitely and finally.

At once the whole course of his life was changed and he followed The Army as carefully as he had avoided it before. He became a Soldier right away and was soon in uniform, first a gunner, then a cap, then full regiments, and in a short time was a Local Officer of Plymouth II Corps.

Shortly after his conversion he was taken seriously ill, and the doctors told him that as a result of his heavy drinking habits his health was completely undermined. A very critical operation was necessary, and for a long time his life was despaired of, and it was the opinion of the doctors and hospital authorities that the best he could hope for was a life of invalidism. But time proved that they were all mistaken, and in spite of every dark foreboding he at length became well and strong, and has continued so to this day. In due course he became a Grace-Reform-Meat agent, then Corps Treasurer, and for six years worked for The Army as an Assurance Agent.

In the Land of the Maple

Meanwhile his son had migrated to Canada and kept writing home about the wonders of the new country. At last his persuasions prevailed and the Brown family sailed for the Land of the Maple Leaf in 1906. Arriving in Toronto, Brother Brown found work at once with the Canadian Northern Railway and later worked for the firm of Massey Harris, remaining in their employ until recently, when his children prevailed upon him to retire and spend his remaining years in the comfort of his age.

For many years he has been a familiar figure at Wychwood Corps, where he has been the Flag-Sergeant for twenty-one years and where his virile figure may still be seen at the head of the march.

He has his own rooms in the home of a married daughter, and there I found him comfortably ensconced in a big chair with his Soldiers' Guide open before him, his whole bearing that of a man who has completed a day's work, and is waiting for his Master to say, "It is enough." —J. G.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Army and the Prisoner

WE ARE pleased this week to be able to give a glimpse at some of The Army's work in the penitentiaries of Canada. The stories are chiefly gleaned from the Ontario Reformatory, at Guelph, where a WAR CRY representative recently had an opportunity of getting them.
They are splendidly representative, however, of what is being done in all the penitentiaries, jails and police courts of the land.

One of The Army's warmest friends in the Dominion is General Hughes, Superintendent of Penitentiaries, and we are very glad to have his endorsement of our work.

In his annual report, recently issued, he highly praises The Army for the splendid service it is giving in the prisons.

The old idea that prisons are places of punishment only is fast giving way to the new idea that they are factories for the re-making of men. As the Superintendent says, "From depraved, neglected, diseased and crooked material received, their object is to turn out, as their product, good citizens, reformed and fully qualified to take their places in the world of work."

This is a task that surely enlists the whole-hearted cooperation of The Army and we thank God for the opportunity afforded us of going amongst the prison population of the Dominion and helping men and women to rise to a better life.

Just as we go to press, a wire comes that Halifax I has increased its "CRY" order to 1,000.

Toronto Field Day

A Field Day will be held on Monday, July 2nd, in commemoration of Founder's Day, at Centre Island. Picnic areas
2, 3, 4 and 5 have been reserved; 73 tables will be provided, thus assuring accommodation for 2,000 people. Further details next week.

TAGGING MR. TORONTO AND FAMILY
ARMY'S TAG DAY BRINGS GENEROUS RESPONSE

A Busy Host of Taggers Gather $12,500

M R. TORONTO, his wife and family, all displayed the little red tag on Saturday last when The Army held its annual Tag Day in the Queen City in aid of the Self-Denial Effort.

An Army of 1,750 taggers went out as soon as the city's life began to stir on the streets in the early hours of the morning. The warm place that The Army holds in the hearts of the public was attested by the very ready response made by all classes and creeds.

Many are the interesting stories related by the taggers.

Noticing that the wording of the tag, "For Others," was being carefully read, the tagger decided to "have a word" with the buyer. "Could there be anything better to live for than 'Others'?"

"No!" was the reply. "You are a wonderful organization." The man returned again and giving another dollar remarked "You are well worth

He dropped into the Tag Box a fifty cent piece, twenty-five cent piece, five cent piece and two coppers.

"Buy a tag?" Before the two gentlemen could reply to the smiling request the tag had been smartly affixed. Both then discovered that they had no change. "I'll trust you," the tagger assured them; and in the hurly-burly that followed, promptly forgot the episode for the time being.

Some time after, the busy tagger heard a voice at her elbow say, "I owe you a quarter." A little later the gentleman appeared. "Are you the young lady who trusted me with a tag?" he asked, and forthwith dropped his donation in the ever-ready box. Both parties doubtless formed their own opinion of the little incident—the gentleman commanding The Army on its policy of trustfulness; the tagger assuring herself that honesty even in small things is happily not unknown in the street.

every cent you get."

At the corner of James and Albert Streets a gentleman, advanced in years and supported by a stick, expressed his feelings toward The Army in a warm manner.

Feeling that he would like to take a part also, he hailed the people as they passed, by waving his stick and ordering them, in a loud voice, to "buy a tag!"

A gentleman approached one of the taggers and said, "Last night I was at Sunnyside and when wandering around I picked up these separate coins. Reading the paper later on during the evening, I noticed The Army was having a Tag Day and decided that I would give the money to

A taxi-driver was already "sporting" one tag, when approached by a business-like tagger, but he bought another—and paid a dollar for it!

An artist was in the Editorial den, putting some finishing touches to a cartoon. "Strange," he remarked casually, "but I haven't been asked to buy a tag yet!" Before one could say "Self-Denial," two zealous taggers who were visiting the "Den" pounced on him. He bought from both.

When one man was asked to buy one of the magic red shields he told the tagger that he had no money, in fact he had been on the street all night because he had no place to sleep. He was promptly directed to the Hostel where arrangements were prevented his attendance at meetings, the last occasion being several were likely to attract the attention of passers-by.

At the conclusion of Sunday's en-

THE COMMISSIONER'S ACTIVITIES

Accompanied by the Chief Secretary, the Commissioner visited Jackson's Point Camp for inspection purposes, extensive rearrangements being now under way for the better accommodation of campers.

Our Territorial Commander also made the rounds of the Toronto Men's Social Institutions in company with Lt.-Colonel Frank Burford, International Social Inspector, and Colonel Moreton, Men's Social Secretary.

At the conclusion of Sunday's engagements at two of Toronto's suburban Corps, the Commissioner paid a visit to a Soldier whose circumstances prevent his attendance at meetings, the last occasion being several months ago. The comrade was delighted at this impromptu visit, and it may be safely assumed that he will treasure the memory for many a "moon."

MRS. LT.-COMMISSIONER MAXWELL
Represents The Army at the Annual Convention of the National Council of Women

The annual meetings of the National Council of Women of Canada have just concluded in Toronto where they were attended by delegates from all parts of Canada.

A praiseworthy feature of the gatherings was the devotional exercises which commenced each day and which were led by representatives of various denominations, Lt.-Commissioner Maxwell conducting one devotional portion.

Mrs. Lt.-Commissioner Maxwell, who represented The Army, took a prominent part during the convention. Mrs. Maxwell is a member of the Standing Committee dealing with equal moral standards and is also on the committee dealing with immigration and colonization.

The delegates were received at Government House by Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Ross and were tendered a banquet by the City at Simony's, at which His Worship Mayor McBride and members of the City Council were present. At this luncheon Mrs. Maxwell was requested to offer prayer.

A DIVISIONAL CHANGE
The Commissioner has decided that Brigadier Knight will farewell from Saint John, N. B., on Sunday, June 24th, and proceed on furlough. Major Kendall will be acting as Divisional Commander, pro-tempore.

FOLLOWING CHRIST AND FINDING CHRIST THE COMMISSIONER

Emphasizes Fundamental Truths at two Inspiring Meetings in Suburban Districts of Toronto—Army's Policy to be Constantly Branching Out—Small Corps Produce Many Good Fighters—God's People Should Live Holy Lives—Reviving Old-Time Songs—Danger of Resisting the Spirit—High Soundings Names do not Change Sin

TWELVE SEEKERS KNEEL AT THE MERCY-SEAT

THE COMMISSIONER spent last Sunday at two Corps in growing suburban districts of Toronto—Swansea and Mount Dennis.

Only a short time ago Swansea was regarded as a rather forlorn outpost in a very scattered settlement, somewhat difficult of access. To get to the Hall in those days meant a long walk from the nearest ear line over a road that was deep in sand and that wound through wooded ravines. The development of Toronto in recent years has effected a magical transformation. A car line now runs along a wide and well-paved street, lined on both sides with stores, banks, apartment houses and office buildings, forming a business section which has every appearance of being a very live one.

Signs of Progress

The woods have disappeared, the old sandy trail to the Humber has become a main thoroughfare, and a populous residential section now exists where once were fields and gardens.

The Army has progressed with the district. The old shack on top of the hill where meetings were first held has been abandoned, and a neat and up-to-date Hall has been erected quite close to the business centre. It cannot be said that it is a very large Corps yet, however, but it is decidedly on the upgrade. Captain Gladys Page and Lieutenant Nellie Williams are the present Officers and they are hopeful that further progress will be made.

It was with a note of triumph in her voice that the Captain announced on Sunday morning that the Corps Self-Denial Target had been well-smashed.

One thing we noticed about this Corps was that it has a good force of Open-air fighters, the Young People being especially prominent in this very important work.

The Commissioner remarked on this in the inside meeting and seized the opportunity of explaining something of The Army's policy as regards extending its work. It was never the Founder's intention, he stated, to concentrate the work at a few large centres. His idea was that The Army should be constantly branching out and forming small fighting units in every place where people could be reached.

By this means greater opportunity is given the Soldiers for God; for Salvationists should never regard themselves as mere members of a congregation, but as active, aggressive soul winners, whose greatest ambition is to extend the Kingdom of Christ.

"As a rule," said the Commissioner, "our small Corps produce the best fighters. So never feel that you don't count for much because you are a small Corps."

On the march from the Open-air to the Hall the Commissioner had given an effective demonstration of how a change of tactics may often be helpful. Instead of keeping the singing going continuously he delivered a short address while on the march, shouting out terse sentences which were likely to attract the attention of passers-by.

The same procedure was followed in the Holiness meeting. Anything savoring of stiffness or formalism is anathema to our Leader. He wants to break the ice of strangeness and aloofness and get right at the hearts of the people in as short a time as possible. We have read about "a parish priest of great austerity" who in order to get messages from God for the common people "climbed up a tall church steeple." One day he was surprised to hear the Lord's voice calling from down below. "Where are you, Lord?" he asked. "Down here among the people," came the reply.

That is certainly where the Master was found during His earthly life, and those who follow Him find that He is closest to them when they are striving to lift the burdens of the lowly and help the distressed, troubled and tempted in their endeavors to escape from the subtleties of Satan and the snares of the world.

Only recently a Toronto professor in addressing a large gathering stressed the fact that really following Christ meant leaving the ninety and nine just persons and going out after the lost one. "Shall we leave that work solely to The Salvation Army?" he asked.

Following Christ

We mention this because the theme of the Holiness meeting at Swansea was following Christ. In the prayer of Major Bristow, the solo of Colonel Ardy, "I've made up my mind that I'll follow," and in the testimonies of Lieutenant Gladys Burrows and Cadet Goodall the thought of following the Master was uppermost.

Following the reading of a Scripture portion by Staff-Captain Pitcher, the Commissioner spoke on the necessity of living a pure and holy life if one would follow Christ. He pointed out that in these days there are so many topics to divert people's minds that there is danger of the most important truths being crowded out.

It is a matter of the most vital importance, he went on to say, that God's people should be holy. Then he made a statement which evidently made many more closely attentive, as if they were saying to themselves, "There, I told you so."

"No person of themselves can live a holy life," he said, "no matter how sweet the natural disposition, or how good you have been born, you cannot meet God's requirements as regards living a holy life."

How to be Holy

He went on to show the utter impossibility of pleasing God unless the heart had been changed by Divine grace, and then plainly outlined what steps must be taken to obtain this new nature.

"It is sin that prevents us from being holy," he said, "and there is no way of getting rid of it except by confession and faith in the Blood of Jesus."

The Holy Spirit was mightily at work in the meeting and it was plain that a number were deeply convicted of their need.

Fishers were soon busy dealing with the people, and the Prayer-meeting went on for about an hour. It was a glorious hour for the Swansea Corps, for no fewer than nine seekers came forward. And the congregation probably did not exceed fifty all told. Victories were won and blessings received that morning which will undoubtedly give an impetus to the work of the Corps.

SALVATION MEETING AT MOUNT DENNIS

Mount Dennis is another rapidly expanding suburban area where The Army is growing with the place. Not so very long ago it was an Outpost of West Toronto, but now it has attained to the status of a Corps, with its own Hall, a Band and a Songster Brigade.

The Corps Hall is the one that was built at Earlscourt before that Corps moved into its present brick Citadel. Transported to Mount Dennis, it is now the home and centre of a vigorous and healthy Corps under the leadership of Captain Thorne.

It was at this Corps that the Commissioner conducted a stirring Salvation meeting on Sunday night.

The "Old, old story" was the theme of the gathering, and Staff-Captain Porter, who led in prayer, besought God to bless the message to the people.

Mrs. Maxwell was at the Commissioner's side in this meeting and gave a helpful talk, uplifting Jesus as the Saviour of all who believe and inviting sinners to plunge into the Fountain.

A solo by Colonel Ardy, "The Cleansing Current," further emphasized the "Old, old story" of the sacrifice on Calvary. The Songster Brigade, under Songster-Leader Pilkcher, sang "Somebody is praying for you," and the Band, consisting of ten members, under Bandmaster Mackie, played a simple hymn tune.

It is the aim of the Commissioner to revive some of the old songs and choruses which brought such blessing and conviction in days gone by. He therefore sang a song which in the old song-book first used in Canada was the first in the Prayer-meeting section, and said to be "suitable for all meetings where the aim is to lead convicted sinners on to Salvation."

An Appealing Song

It is an appealing song, portraying the desolate state of the wanderer from God, the enormity of his sins and the great love of the Father who longs for his return. The first verse runs as follows:

"Afar from Heaven thy feet have wandered,
Afar from God thy soul has strayed;
His gifts in sin thy hand has squandered,
Yet still in love, He calls thee home."

Our Leader's address was an earnest and powerful appeal to the sinner to cease rebelling against God and to seek His mercy and forgiveness. He warned of the great danger of resisting the Holy Spirit when He spoke to the heart, showing plainly the ways of life and death.

The matchless love of God in giving His only Son to die for sinners was magnified by the Commissioner, and the only way of Salvation was clearly proclaimed.

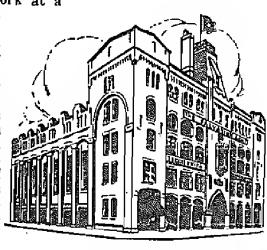

He struck out at many modern views which have a tendency to minimize sin by calling it by some high-sounding name. Wicked actions are still abomination in God's sight, he declared, no matter how men may endeavor to gloss them over and try to persuade themselves that there is no such thing as punishment for evil. Salvationists have no use for such views, they stand by the fundamentals of the Christian religion; they believe in the Bible and stake their all upon the Atonement as God's remedy for sin.

Visibly Moved

Many in the audience were visibly moved as the Commissioner spoke, and it was evident that great struggles were going on in a number of hearts. As the fishers moved among the people they found abundant confirmation of this. The Holy Spirit was operating powerfully on many people and they were facing a momentous crisis in their lives. Three surrendered to the Spirit's strivings ere the meeting closed, but several, we fear, went away sorrowful because they loved their sins and their unholy gains and were not willing to give them up.

The meeting came to a close in a most joyful manner, many Officers and Soldiers giving testimony in song and word to the blessing of Salvation.

Among the Officers who were present and took part during the day, beside those already mentioned, were Brigadier and Mrs. Burrows, Mrs. Lt.-Colonel Whatley, Major and Mrs. Church and Major and Mrs. Bristow.

Our Musical Fraternity

BAND AND BRIGADE CHAT

It is announced that the Dovercourt Band is to broadcast a program from Station CFRR on June 12th, between 8 and 9 p.m.

A recently-formed Young People's Band at Orlin made its debut at that Corps on May 24th, when at a Musical Festival, 29 Bandsaster, all in their jerseys were present, with their instruments by Major R. A. Brow, who was supported by the Chief Magistrate. $600.00 has been subscribed towards equipment already. The program given received much credit from the patient teaching of Band Leader Homewood. May these budding instrumentalists develop into real Salvationist-musicians.

Our cartoon this week will be appreciated by Officers and Bandsmen alike. The new Band Tune Book is still—everday and in every way we're getting better and better.

There is an informative article in the BANDSMAN AND SINGER on "How to become a good flugel player," by Lt.-Colonel Fuller, the Staff Bandmaster. This instrument of recent years is coming to us now. We shall hope to publish that article in a future issue.

A Canada East Bandmaster writes music in a scathing complaint regarding the timeliness of the arrival of recent issues of the ordinary series Band Journal. This has certainly come from the heart of our comrade really understanding the enormous amount of extra labor involved in producing the new Tune Book and the number of hours of work that must have gone into it. We shall hope to publish this article in a future issue.

The Kartesour Band visited Christies Street Hospital on Sunday morning, June 3rd, and had the pleasure of cheering Captain Lambert, the Hospital Chaplain, who is the author of "A Chapter which is a Social Occasion," having closely identified with the Band's efforts, was very appreciative of the charity.

Are Contesting Bands Better Than Army Bands?

[This provocative question arises in the following article, in which an Australian Bandmaster expresses his thoughts on the present possibilities of Army Bands and music.]

AT SOME recent festivals held in Melbourne and Adelaide, great encouragement was received by those interested in Salvation Army music, relative to the standard of playing attained by some of the Bands taking part.

There were present several outside musical authorities, including adjudicators, and they went out of their way to send messages of congratulation. How good a thing it would be if, by attracting such men to our festivals and meetings, it led to their conversion.

Writing of the occasion to a friend, and telling of the splendid way in which his Band showed up, the Australian Bandmaster said:

"For the first time in my Army experience I was really satisfied that our Band had done well. As you know, I was for many years connected with Australia's leading contesting bands, and had considerable success in this direction.

"After my conversion, I resolved that if I ever had the opportunity, I would endeavor to convince 'outside' bands that Army Bands could reach as high a standard as they have attained. In many instances, I know, it would be idle to say that in point of playing contesting bands are not ahead of Salvation Army Bands. But why should they be?"

"Regarding the spiritual aspect of banding, Army Bands have a distinct advantage, and that is in the music they play. It has about it something that so-called worldly music—ever the classics—has not, and that is true soul. I have played most of the finest music of the masters that has been arranged for brass combinations, and, truly, some of it is wonderful. But some outside publications have nothing to compare with such pieces as 'Man of Sorrows,' 'Discipleship,' 'A Soldier's Experience,' and 'My Jesus,' with their inspiring arrangements of such simple, wonderful movements as, 'He parades a rebel like me,' 'I think of all His sorrow,' 'He died of a broken heart,' 'Remember me, O Mighty One,' 'Christ is all-in-all,' 'I have service in His service,' and many others."

"With all humility, yet with a certain feeling of pride, I consider that the Band which I have the honor to lead, is now coming to play these movements in a manner that does them justice. The Army has many Bands which can 'get through' any-

WHERE IS IT?

A picture which speaks for itself through harmony; surely there is no more entrancing way. Pictures are often entrancing; the spoken word may be uttered dramatically; but soulful music is a universal language appealing to all hearts. It appeals to the babe; it amuses the child; it casts a spell in its mystery over the majority of young people, and is restful to middle-aged and old. There are but few people outside of its influence, regardless of nationality or social status. So I want to claim for music a place in the front ranks as an effective channel in spreading the glorious news of Salvation.

Praise Him with melody
Praise Him with song,
Sing of His holiness all the day long.

Give Him all majesty earth can afford.
Praise Him with melody,
Praise ye the Lord.

The above verse surely expresses what all who love the Lord should strive to do. We picture Heaven as the home of perfect harmony; then let us unite in a sincere effort, by vocal and instrumental music, to bring the glad message to lonely sin-stained hearts.

As you would search the Scriptures for treasure by the way, also search your song book for pearls, and your search there will be regarded, too.—A. E. B.

START A SINGING BRIGADE

IT WILL REPAY YOU

MUSIC is an art which rests on a surer way to get to the heart of a composition than by performing it. Music is beautiful sound vitalized by feeling, fully grasped through man's emotional nature. Participation in chorus singing is not only unselfish, but is creative of sympathy, and there is, therefore, no better medium of musical culture than membership in a Singer's Brigade.

There is hardly a Corps, great or small, that cannot maintain a Singing Brigade. The public schools of to-day teach elementary music, and seeing that the hope for the development of Singing Brigades is largely to be expected from the young people, this early learning should not be lost, as is generally the case, but can be applied for useful service by the appointing of some person to cultivate the seed that has been sown.

Even in our Company Meetings the opportunity is presented for some organized effort that would be of undoubted worth to the Corps and of great blessing to all. Greater interest should be shown in this matter. You will always find that meetings that have been of the greatest blessing have been largely made so by the spirit put into them.

Capable musicians are not to be found everywhere, but latent talent abounds, and undoubtedly concentrated effort to develop musical abilities will be surprising in its results.

The choice of pieces for singing is important. Songs should not be chosen with a few good singers in mind, without a thought of the weaker ones who will also sing. Some simple song should be chosen, but the music must always be before the singer if proper development is to come. Four part harmony is exemplified in the voices.

Should it be that your Corps does not possess an organized Brigade of Singers, become interested in this production without delay and begin to develop this aspect of the work. It will repay you.

HAMILTON II BAND WEEK-END

A recent week-end's meetings, conducted by the local member under the leadership of Bandmaster Sharp, proved the most interesting to the history of the Band. The week-end started with a Rousing Open-air on Saturday evening followed by a musical indoor program was given on Sunday afternoon, the younger members of the band taking prominent part.

On Monday night a Musical Festival was given, when four Triumphant instruments were dedicated and presented by Lt.-Colonel McNaughton, who ably presided at the gathering. An appeal was made to the congregation to help in the purchase of other new instruments. The Band items consisted of a march, "Fighting for the Lord," "My Jesus," "American Melodeon," and "Encore to American Melodeon." Other items were also rendered.

The Band is making good progress. Our motto is "Bigger and Better."

different in our playing shall awaken in them a consciousness of spiritual need.

PARTNERSHIP FESTIVAL AT THE TORONTO TEMPLE

THE COMMISSIONER

Presides at a highly-interesting event

In Toronto Temple, on Monday last, was held what in London is called a "Partnership Festival," the EarlsCourt and Temple Bands uniting to render an evening's program of music.

The crowd of enthusiasts who were present, and they included some comrades from Hamilton I., were not slow to signify their approval of the musical treat provided.

The Commissioner—a stalwart champion of our musical forces, and ever ready to encourage Army music by his presence—presided, and by his side was Mrs. Maxwell, and also the Chief Secretary, who gave the Bible reading during the evening, the Field Secretary, Colonel Aubrey and Adjutant McBain, the Corps Officer. Among those present was also Lt.-Colonel Attwell, than whom there is no more loyal and devoted music "fan" if one may borrow the term.

The program furnished us with an opportunity of hearing some new music for the first time. The selection "Gethsemane" was one such piece. There were other items from recent Journals with which a number in the audience made their first acquaintance. The festival march, "The Glory of the Combat," played by EarlsCourt, for instance, and the cornet solo, "Silver Threads," given so well by Bandsman Bray of the Temple Band. "Warriors of the Cross," given by the latter Band, was also new to many.

Army pieces of riper acquaintance were the selections "Rockingham" and "Over Jordan," both rendered by EarlsCourt, "Immanuel's Praise" by the United Bands, and "The Advance March" also taken unitedly.

As we have indicated, the brass playing was of a high order, both Bands were in splendid shape and gave much pleasure.

We must not fail to mention the very effective vocal soloing of Sister B. Boys of EarlsCourt, who sang in splendid voice "Grace Sufficient," a piece from the March M. S., also the Instrumental Quartet, "Happiness," given by EarlsCourt Bandsman, and last, but certainly not least, the pianoforte solo by Bandmaster Audouin, L.T.C.L.

The Commissioner, at the conclusion, paid high compliment to the efforts of the musicians, thanking, on behalf of the audience, Bandmaster Audouin, of EarlsCourt Band, Master Hanagan, of the Temple, Adjutant Coles, who led the united items, and all who had participated for "a most enjoyable evening."

Envoy and Mrs. Dawson, to whose splendid work at the Ontario Reformatory, at Guelph, reference is made on page 3

SYDNEY (Captain and Mrs. Everett)—We are rejoicing over a smashed Self-Denial Target. Our Senior Altar Service realized about $150.00. TWO young men, who had been absent, came in to the meeting. Our Band and Officers recently visited Sydneys Mines and gave a Musical in aid of that Corps' Self-Denial.

Graduation Exercises at Saint John

SIX NURSES OF THE ARMY'S EVANGELINE HOSPITAL RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

A CLASS of six nurses graduated from The Army's Evangeline Maternity Hospital, and received diplomas and pins at impressive graduation exercises in Centenary Hall recently conducted by the Women's Social Secretary.

After opening devotions, Brigadier Knight heartily congratulated the graduates on their choice of a life of sacrifice and service for others, recalling that the one word "Others" had been the message of encouragement and exhortation for The Salvation Army workers throughout all countries sent by William Booth.

Dr. L. M. Curran said it was a pleasure to speak words of commendation to the graduates entering the profession of caring for the sick.

and the Superintendent of the Evangeline Maternity Hospital, Adjutant Sibbick. Staff-Captain Ursaki offered the dedicatory prayer.

Lt.-Colonel DesBrisay spoke of the great need of such service as the graduates were now trained to give. More than any other branch of nursing she believed this was a real national service, especially in view of Canada's high maternal death rate.

The predecessors of the graduates were achieving splendid success, and she hoped that similar success would attend the graduates of that afternoon. The nine Army Hospitals in the Territory had all had a year of greater success.

At Halifax a ninety-six bed Hospital was maintained, and it had affilihis feet on the platform, he contrasted the scene with the different one that had witnessed his own graduation. It marked the influence of women, he believed. The graduates were on the threshold of great opportunities, for he believed there was no branch of nursing that demanded greater qualifications than that in which the graduates were about to enter.

Dr. Curran admonished the graduates to determine to fill their responsibility courageously and well, displaying character, judgment, resourcefulness, tactfulness and patience.

The graduates repeated after Lt.-Colonel DesBrisay the solemn Florence Nightingale Pledge, following which diplomas and pins were presented by Mr. S. Brigadier Knight

Lt.-Colonel DesBrisay agreed with Dr. Curran that it was a great help for the nurses to train in The Army Institutions under Christian influences. She paid a glowing tribute to the medical profession for assistance given Army Hospitals and for the service freely rendered to the poor.

The Evangeline Hospital in Saint John was well maintaining its splendid work of other years, she said, and she hoped for the graduates that they might give successful, happy service in the Master's name.

A greatly enjoyed reception followed the graduating exercises.

FIELD SECRETARY visits Owen Sound, Wiarton, Palmerston and Seaford

COLONEL TAYLOR, the Field Secretary, conducted a recent Sunday's meetings at Owen Sound. At the Holiness meeting a goodly number gathered. Brigadier Burton, who supported the Colonel opened the meeting and introduced the visitor. Personal testimony from Brigadier Burton and Mrs. Captain Gage followed.

The Colonel's address was listened to and enjoyed by all. The need of deep spiritual experimental religion was extolled and the essentials required for obtaining it were clearly explained. All present left with a fuller realization of their personal responsibility to God, to themselves and to others. One young woman, who had come nine miles to be present, sought and found the Saviour at the close of the service.

The afternoon service was conducted at Wiarton. Captain Chatterton and Lieutenant Bailey had secured the Baptist Church and announced a lecture by the Colonel, at which the Mayor was to preside. Owing to the death of a prominent business man, however, he could not come, and many other citizens were also unavoidably deprived of being present as the funeral was held on Sunday afternoon. However, a very good crowd gathered. An orchestra, composed of a number of young people who play in this Church, furnished music which was greatly appreciated. The Colonel's splendid address was of much blessing to young and old.

For the night meeting the Colonel returned to Owen Sound. Several outside friends, who had known the Colonel since his boyhood days, had come to see and hear him. A feature

One man accompanied his mate in the box with some most ingenuous remarks about "always begging." The tagger replied that there were always people in need, ending up with "You don't know when you may be in need of help yourself." This slowed up the cream of his grumbling somewhat, and his flow was completely stopped by a little procession of passers-by, every one of whom bought a tag most chearfully.

An enterprising Guard tagger hails a milkman with the usual query, but he already has a tag. "Let me try your horses," he asked smugly.

"A new idea," thought the milkman, but entering into the spirit of the idea, he gave willing consent.

It was a much-tagged dairy牛 which clattered away down Yonge Street, the driver grinning broadly.

A small lad, of five or six Summers, accosted a tagger thus: "Say, I've got fifteen cents; I'll give you a nickel for a tag." The tagger readily obliged the little fellow and he departed happily.

ability to recognize symptoms of serious or contagious diseases or evidences of serious injury necessitating the prompt attention of a physician, who in many cases lives many miles away, and even then when needed may be as many miles from home.

The Field Secretary conducted Officers' Councils at Palmerston on Monday, assisted by Brigadier Burton and Staff-Captain Wright. The public meeting at night was well attended. Officers from Listowel, Mount Forest, Hanover, Owen Sound, Wiarton, Wingham and Palmerston being present. Bandsmen from Listowel and Hanover came in.

This is an old battleground of the Colonel's, and he was delighted to renew many old acquaintances. Brigadier Burton dedicated the child of Brother and Sister Broughton. Colonel Taylor concluded with most interesting address, and the meeting closed with a general consecration.

At Seaford, Officers' Councils were also held. Between meetings the Colonel found time to visit Mrs. Smith, a comrade in her ninety-third year, and Mrs. Murray, an aged friend who attended services with the Colonel was stationed here thirty-four years ago. Officers were present from Forest, Thedford, Exeter, Clinton, Goderich, Stratford and Woodstock.

The public meeting was participated in by the visiting Officers. The Colonel was heartily welcomed. During his address, the Colonel referred to the time he was Divisional Officer of the Seaforth Corps and Officer of the Seaforth District, recalling happy memories.

Colonel Taylor, certainly deserves to be congratulated on the management of the corps. It was very evident that much time and thought and time were given to the preparation of the program. THEY GAVE GLADLY FORTUNE (Captain and Mrs. Edison Herbert Battison)—On a recent Sunday afternoon we held the Altar Service in the Self-Denial Chapel. Ensign Ensign gave a short talk entitled "The Army of the Helping Hand." He described The Army in Great Britain, East India, etc. He also gave brief account of the African glorifying incidents of both spirituality and Seaford Work. The Ensign surprised some in the audience by singing choruses in various languages. The talk turned intensely interesting and informative, and merited the rapt attention of those who were present.

A large company of people laid their gifts on the Alter. The Young People led the way in compunction, marched by their Guards, the women followed by their husbands, the local officers, the brothers brought up to date. The offerings represented real sacrifices on the part of many, who, though in foreign lands,

It was very evident that much time and thought and time were given to the preparation of the program.

of this meeting was the Self-Denial Altar Service, the result of which was slightly above last year. A selection from the Band and a vocal selection from the Songsters brought blessing and help into the meeting. Colonel Taylor gave a most helpful Salvation address, bringing before the backsliders and sinners the awful consequences of sin. Captain and Mrs. Gage are making their way into the hearts of the people of Owa Sound, the Corps is on the up-grade and good times are in store.

The Field Secretary conducted Officers' Councils at Palmerton on Monday, assisted by Brigadier Burton and Staff-Captain Wright. The public meeting at night was well attended. The service closed with a consecration.

THE "GENERAL FACTOTUM"

The Army Officer in Newfoundland Outports is True Servant of All

A Captain's Thrilling Adventure

THAT THE ARMY OFFICER in Newfoundland holds a unique position in many places. In those outports where no clergyman, nurse or doctor is permanently stationed, he or she is the general factotum to the community and usually the final authority on a wide and varied number of questions.

Thus it will be seen that every bit of general knowledge required is at some time or other useful. Especially is a knowledge of first-aid and an times called upon to substitute for a doctor.

One morning in January he stood with snowshoes in hand at the gate of the garden which surrounded his quarters. He intended to walk through the wood as a short cut to another village where some of his Soldiers lived, but he was halted by his intention by the uplifted hand of a man who was coming along the road toward him from the opposite direction.

"Good morning!" greeted the Captain, "did you want me?" "Yes, Captain," answered the man, "Old Min, she be took awful bad, and we don't know what to do. Will 'ee come and see her."

Poor Min was a half simple creature, whose lack of morals had often got her into trouble. She had drifted into the place some years before, from away down shore, and the good people of Silver Cove had little sympathy for her.

As soon as the Captain entered the low-roofed house in which poor Min lived—a wretched hovel when compared with the trim and tidy cottages and pretty bungalows which surrounded the Cove—he saw that Min's condition was such as to need a doctor if her life was to be saved.

Enquiries revealed that all the men were away to the lumber camps on the other side of the Bay and that before any one could get back from there to go for the doctor, Min would be past hope of recovery.

The Captain then must go himself. City bred, and new to that part of the ability to recognize symptoms of serious or contagious diseases or evidence of serious injury necessitating the prompt attention of a physician. The Army of the Healing has been described as "The Army of Doctors." Each year it also speaks briefly of India and Africa, giving many incidents of both spiritual and physical work. The Foreign Service surprised some of us by singing choruses in the Eastern lands, and the music sounded intensely interesting and inspiring, and invited the rapt attention of all given by the splendid crowd which attended.

A splendid company of people had gathered in the Altar. The Young Ladies' Guild, the women Soldiers came into the room, followed by the Local Officers; the brothers brought up the rear. The offerings represented real generosity on the part of many, who, we trust, gave gladly to the needs of those foreign lands.

Sermons in Song

A very splendid Biblical Program, entitled "Joseph, or love conquers all," was given by the St. John's Songster Band, at Bell Hall's, and later repeated at Bell Hall's, to the delight of a large crowd which composed of Captain Marlou Barter, the Songster, certainly deserves to be congratulated on the arrangement of the program, for it was indeed a great success, and much time was taken and time devoted in arranging the event.

At the conclusion of the program, at Bell Hall, a visit of thanks was extended to Commandant Harry by the ing to make their short stay on the iron Isle so enjoyable.

Keeping the Flag Flying

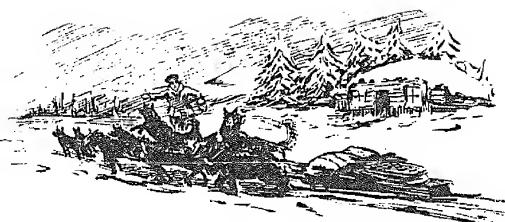

GARNISH (Captain and Mrs. Brown)—With week's special meetings have been held which resulted in THREE new recruits for parades and ONE other for Sanction. Although a number of our Soldiers have gone to the fishery we are endeavoring to keep the old flag flying.

Progress at New Opening

MICHIGAN MINES (Captain Tuck)—With the opening of the new school year, the students have moved into the mine building on the main street, and if things are willed by God, as we have prayed, we shall have a new hall erected in the near future. The people of this place are much interested in The Army and its methods. On May six we had our first parade and Open-air for this season. Quite a crowd gathered to hear the band play the Gospel. We are praying for more souls and deeper things of God in the future.—Captain Harold Anstey.

Visitors Lend a Hand

NEW YORK (Captain Phillips)—The past few weeks have been times of very great blessing. Captain Minnie Ellis has come to lead us forward, and although numbers are not large, God has graciously given us an able corps. A recent visit from our comrades, Brother and Sister W. H. Button and Sister Mrs. Charles Harris, who were Soldiers of the Corps some time ago, was a great encouragement. Coming from Somerville, U.S.A., where Brother Button is Sergeant-Major. Their visit was the means of blessing to us. On Sunday last we had a day of victory. ONE soul returning to God.

country, never having been farther north than his immediate surroundings, possessing only a general idea of the direction, the Captain hastily prepared for the thirty mile trip to the town where the doctor resided, and where a married Officer was also stationed.

Our Officer figured that a team of dogs was a necessity, but could not get any one team. Securing a dog here and two there, in a while eight dogs were fastened to the sledge knowing nothing of each other, not accustomed to working together, with a driver who knew nothing of them or how to manage them.

The Captain had been a Scout and through his training had learnt to keep cool and be observant, besides being a little trail wise, but looking back at the episode now, he hopes that he has been forgiven for the many times during the long drive that he practised deceit upon his canary-colored team by showing a crow and rabbit that was not there, and inciting them to catch an imaginary man. Suffice it to say that having found the doctor home and seen him set off to Min's help in his own splendid dog-team, the Captain was glad to hand over the dogs to a more experienced driver who happened to be returning, and taking his snowshoes from the sleigh, decided to stay the night with the Officer and help do the meeting at this town.

Bright and early next morning before daylight, with wood-stock skates attached to skin boots and snowshoes strapped on his back, the Captain started homeward. What a glorious exhilarating trip that was down the wind-swept ice. Propelled by a brisk breeze for fifteen miles he fairly flew along, exulting in perfect health of body, soundness of mind, and peace of soul.

Suddenly as he swept around the point, there appeared before him and almost at his feet, a wide fissure in the ice, through which the cold green freezing water lapped. Not an instant to plan a retreat, but with a prayer, and a spring upward and forward carried by the impetus of his speed, the Captain landed squarely on his skates on the other side of the crack and was carried forward into the safety of the ice-locked cove. Unstrapping his skates, and before slinging his snowshoes off, the Captain knelt on the snow and thanked God for deliverance from danger.

Victory in Sight

CARONFAR (Ensign and Mrs. Howitt, Captain Barnes)—On Thursday May 10th the Home League gave a Song-service entitled "The Ten Utmost." The audience was greatly struck to realize the need of being ready for the coming of the Bridegroom. The proceeds were in aid of the Self-Denial effort, which is well under way, and the new year is in sight. The Corps has done well during the Winter, and we have had the joy of seeing many come to God. The fire still burns.

TROUT RIVER (Captain A. J. Ridout)—We are very sorry to report that our Officer, Captain A. J. Ridout, has had to leave us and go for a rest. He labored for a long time under great difficulties. When visited by the Locals and Soldiers he always had a word of comfort, a smile for all. His great influence for good will not be forgotten. Before he left we had the joy of seeing our Self-Denial Target reached. Captain's day saw some good signs of conversion have been seen, while much improvement has gone on in the way of property requirements, and Locals have been made. Corps Song-S.S.—White carries on—V.P.S.—Mrs. H. Barnes.

A mile or two over the hill brought the Captain to a hamlet where he enjoyed the well-known hospitality of the secluded villages of Newfoundland, and as the day was advancing and another bay yet remained to be covered, with a song or two and prayer, the Officer pressed on his way.

As the afternoon drew to a close, the weather became threatening and soon snow began to fall and a high wind sprang up. Rapidly the early afternoon closed to premature dusk, and when five miles from home and the Bay yet to travel, a dirty night appeared evident.

The Captain had been a Scout and through his training had learnt to keep cool and be observant, besides being a little trail wise, but looking back at the episode now, he hopes that he has been forgiven for the many times during the long drive that he practised deceit upon his canary-colored team by showing a crow and rabbit that was not there, and inciting them to catch an imaginary man. Suffice it to say that having found the doctor home and seen him set off to Min's help in his own splendid dog-team, the Captain was glad to hand over the dogs to a more experienced driver who happened to be returning, and taking his snowshoes from the sleigh, decided to stay the night with the Officer and help do the meeting at this town.

tain's life was saved by the fact that the snow shoes that he had in his hands fell flat on the top ice and raising himself on them he was enabled to crawl forward the few feet to the firm ice.

Instantly the wet clothing was exposed to the air, it froze solid, but he proceeded onward, keeping the wind to the side of his face until his home side of the Bay was reached, where, looking like a mediaeval knight in full armor, he arrived just in time to light a fire, change, have a rub down, a cup of tea, and hurry off to the Soldiers' meeting thanking God for His care and protection. The WAR CRY

The Official Gazette of The Salvation Army in Canada East and Newfoundland

No. 2278. Price Five Cents.

TORONTO 2, JUNE 16th, 1928.

WILLIAM MAXWELL, Lt.-Commissioner.

TERRITORIAL PARS

In connection with the Field Secretary's recent visit to Seaford, where he was stationed thirty-four years ago, the Colonel met a comrade who was on the same ship at that date—Graham Smith—and who is 32 years of age. Her days of usefulness are not yet over, as those Officers are willing to touch who taste her "grapes" at the Officers' tent. God bless "Graham".

Riverdale Band will visit Bracebridge next Saturday, June 17th, and the Dowercourt Band will accompany the Chief Secretary to Barrie, on July 1st.

Adjutant Bexton of Kitchener recently underwent an operation of some seriousness, and is still confined to hospital. Ensign Ethel Peag, T.M.C., has been "under the weather" also, necessitating his absence from his duties. Pray for these comrades.

Word has been received of the safe arrival of Commandant and Mrs. Condie at Port-of-Spain, Trinidad.

Our Editorial alias, i.e., the Printing Department stalwarts, are anticipating with gladness the 26th of June, when their fourth annual picnic will be held—this year at the "Cottage Inn". Among the many interesting items programmed is that of a tug-of-war between "Comps and Press", i.e., Compositors and Pressmen.

In the latest issue to hand of the West Indies (Western) WAR CRY we note that Mrs. Commandant Lewis arranged a special Easter Song Service, which was given with great success at all the Corps in Bermuda.

Treasurer James Cook of Cornwall, wishes to state that his total for Tag Day reached the splendid sum of $90.00, and not $85.00, as previously reported.

Adjutant Martin, of Danforth Corps, "joined in" for an unexpected, but none-the-less appreciated, job the other day by visiting a school of taggers, and finding that they were requested by the Principal to present over fifty certificates to pupils who had succeeded in memorizing six passages of Scripture. It is worthy of note that about four hundred similar certificates have been presented within recent months. This school principal is progressing on right lines.

Earlscourt Band is programmed to present a musical program at the Banting United Church on Tuesday, June 12th, and will visit Owen Sound for Saturday, Sunday and Monday, June 19th.

On Saturday, June 16th, a party of twelve students, under charge of Brother Alfred Simson, will give a program of music at Toronto 1, and on the following Saturday at Toronto Temple. Items will be given by the Harmonica band and pieces rendered on guitars, violins and mandolins.

The Field Secretary will conduct the meetings at North Toronto on Sunday, June 17th.

Lt.-Colonel Whately is at present in Newfoundland conducting a Sub-Territorial audit.

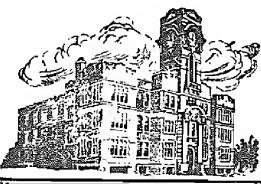

Mrs. Staff-Captain Pitcher recently underwent an operation at Bloor Street Hospital, which, although not of a complicated character in itself, proved more serious than had been anticipated. We are happy to announce, however, that our comrade has left the Hospital and is making an encouraging recovery.

Five at the Cross

NEW GLASGOW (Adjutant and Mrs. Stevens)—On Saturday and Sunday, May 26-27, we were privileged to have the Major and Mrs. Tilley. On Sunday morning the Major took the children of the Directory Class and spoke very helpful words to them. The Holiness meeting was a time of great blessing; at the close one sister renewed her vows to God. The Major also gathered for the Salvation meeting, while the Major delivered a stirring address to the unsaved, and at the close we received five sin-burdened souls feeling at the Cross.—Candidate V. McLean.

Despite the Storm

COLLINGWOOD (Captain and Mrs. Powell)—God is with us and is blessing our work. We all joined heart and hand to gain our objective to sell salvation. Even our aged comrade Sister McCroy helped. She stood out in the rain and storm to get her target. Our Home League is progressing and new members are being added to our numbers. Our Juniors and each branch of the Corps are doing their part to help roll the old chariot along.—Corres. Mrs. E. Van-Dougenet.

Specials Bring Inspiration

WHITBY (Captain Purdy, Lieutenant Leach)—On Thursday, May 31st, we were favored by a visit from our Territorial Commissioner, Major Kendall, accompanied by Staff-Captain Ritchie. It was the Major's first visit to Whitby, and proved the help and inspiration to all. For the week-end, June 2-3rd, we had the pleasure of having Captain and Mrs. Atkinson. Rousing Open-air services were held in Whitchurch and Pickering on Saturday. On Sunday morning a meeting was held in the jail yard, some twenty prisoners being in

Band "Going Strong"

BARRIE (Ensign and Mrs. Langford)—Territorial Headquarters, spent a recent week-end at this Corps. On Saturday evening, in spite of the rain, a rousing Open-air was held, during which people gathered to listen to the message. The Band, which has been re-organized, attracted much attention. The indoor meeting was a success of much interest, fine crowd assembled for the Sunday morning Holiness meeting. The Company Meeting was honored to have the visitors present, and helpful messages were given to the young people. The band gathered. In the Salvation meeting the infant child of Ensign Langford was dedicated by Brigadier Blosse, who also served the Salvation Army Service. The meeting was one of inspiration, and after a well-fought Prayer-meeting ONE soul surrendered.

The town people are greatly interested in the Work of the Army at this place. Ensign Langford has been gathering together parcels of clothing and has sent them to Haliburton County for the needy there.

Visitors Bring Blessing

BRAMPTON (Captain and Mrs. Warrender)—On Sunday, May 26th we had with us Major Sparke. In the afternoon Major gave an interesting talk to the young people followed by the Young People's Self-Denial Altar Service. At night the Major's message was a blessing to all.

We were honored with a visit from

Brigadier and Mrs. Wood of Territorial Headquarters. For the week-end of May 26-27, Two Open-air were held on Saturday night, and good crowds listened to the message followed by the singing of hymns.

Sunday we had a good day all through, speaking and singing of Ensign and

Mrs. Wood was of much blessing and on Monday night another brother surrendered his life to God.—Corps Corres.

FORTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY SERVICES
Twenty-Three at the Altar

LISGAR STREET (Brigadier Keith, Captain Hurst)—During the weekend Lisgar Street, the forty-second Anniversary of the Corps' opening was celebrated. Major and Mrs. Kendall conducted the meetings. From the pulpit to the close on Sunday night, at eleven p.m., the meetings were brimful of interest and enthusiasm. Holiness meeting was a season of blessing. In the afternoon two of the oldest communicants gave some interesting reminiscences of the days when Lisgar first opened. Brigadier and Mrs. Kendall were present, and the latter also gave an interesting talk on the happy times she had spent at the Corps some years ago, being connected with Lisgar.

This being the Anniversary of the "Empress of Ireland" disaster, in which so many of Lisgar's choicest saints were taken from us, by Mrs. Adjutant Humphries of Canterbury, U.S.A., was placed on the Memorial Tablet by Brother T. Green, as the Band and Singers rose and sang, "When Peace like a River".

Anniversary messages were read from former Officers, also Officers who have gone out from the Corps. These included Brigadier Byers, Mrs. Major Hill, who went on the "Empress of Ireland" and was in the West Indies, Staff-Captain Ayre, U.S.A. (retired), Major Cameron, Major Harvey, Mrs. Staff-Captain Spenser, Mrs. Neale, and Mrs. Osborne, Adjutant Major and Mrs. Bristow, Adjutant McLean and Ensign Hayward, Captains Blake and Gennery, Lieutenants McElroy and Gray.

At the close of service, Commandant Cox, who was stationed here some years ago, gave a ringing testimony. Mrs. Kendall's address was full of fire and inspiration. Then after the older members came forward to renew their vows, until we finished up with TWENTY-THREE at the Altar. The Band and Singers' Brigade rendered valuable service all day.—G.H.F.

A Smashed Target

TRINTON, N.B. (Captains Wood and Billings)—We can report victory in the Self-Despair effort, with a smashed target. We have hopes of three new Corps Cadets for the next Course. God is with us.
